

NONE IS MORE FAIR

Chrysanthemums Are Among the Sweetest OF THE POPULAR FLOWERS

They Bloom Late in the Season and the Shades and Tints Are Exquisite. Society News.

What is prettier than the chrysanthemum, with its feathery blossoms of white, yellow, pink and other colors and shades? It blooms at a time of the year when there are few other flowers, when the nights are long and the days are short, when the leaves have fallen and the bare trees are tossing their branches in the cold November winds. It comes to brighten the dullness of late autumn and to add a dash of color to the parlor. For decorative purposes nothing can surpass this flower. The stems are long and graceful, the foliage is pretty and the blossoms are large.

By their use the one color idea can be carried out to perfection. The pink varieties come in all the shades from deep rose to a mere suggestion of the tint, the last being very beautiful. There are many shades of yellow and red, and also a pure white. Chrysanthemums are very effective for fall teas, and it is a pretty idea to have the table linen, dishes and napkins embroidered with the flower in the preferred color.

Too much thought can scarcely be given to the arrangement of the small tables seating two, four, or possibly six guests, and the large central one on which are placed the supplies. The small table should have for each guest a plate, fork, two spoons and napkin, and should be provided with creamer and sugar. At one end of the large table is placed the coffee urn and the cups and saucers. At the other the tea service. The menu is placed on this table, care being taken not to overload it. Extra supplies are to be kept in waiting in the adjoining pantry. There are so many pleasing ways of decorating the table that it will not be necessary to particularize. The simplicity of the menu need not imply negligence on the part of the hostess. Much care and labor may be bestowed upon the preparation of the sandwiches, which may comprise a dozen different kinds and may be roughly classed as double and single, after the manner of the florist. Plain white bread buttered, doubled and cut into squares and diamonds and plain graham bread treated in the same manner will furnish two varieties of sandwiches. Ham sandwiches have been known since the days of Noah, but a clever woman recently invented a new way of preparing them. She used thin slices of fried ham with a mayonnaise dressing and the combination was excellent. Tongue sandwiches are also well known. The best chicken sandwiches are made from the white meat only, and there are several ways of making these sandwiches. One way is to omit the butter, but the bread is usual. Gravy old dry cheese, moistened slightly with sweet cream, placed between two slices of bread and pressed lightly together. They must be fashioned just before serving. Another way is to slice cream cheese very thin and lay it between delicate wafers. A novelty is the egg sandwich, which is built on the foundation of a single layer of bread buttered and cut thin in disc-shaped pieces. A dressing is made of the yolks of hard-boiled eggs rubbed to a paste with salad oil, cayenne pepper and salt. Allow one yolk and six drops of oil to a sandwich. Mound the mixture on the bread and garnish with a large ring out from the whites.

Simplicity of furnishing is said to be the rule in Washington in many of the homes of the ultra fashionable of the nation's capital. It is not an unusual thing to find there a house furnished with ingrain carpets, simple lace curtains, wicker furniture and other dainties. Every room in the house is intended for ordinary every day use, and many servants are kept, giving the mistress much leisure for the cultivation of society and for intellectual pleasures. One peculiar feature of Washington social life is the fact that every one knows exactly what is the income drawn by every official. When a woman makes out a list of guests for a party or a reception, she knows just how many are the wives of $5,000 men and how many are the wives of $10,000 men. Deception as to one's income is impossible, and the direct effect is beneficial. There is no attempt at display beyond the means. No woman cares to be criticized as to the amount of her expenditures, when it is known they are beyond reasonable limits, so the women grasp common sense by the hand and live within their means.

Years ago "before the war" the servant problem was fully solved by the people south of a certain invisible but well marked line generally alluded to as Mason & Dixon's line. The ideal servant lived in the south. He had the manners of a gentleman combined with polite deference. He was obedient, yet reserved, omnipresent yet invisible. He was always at home when wanted, yet he never bothered the mistress with guests in the kitchen. He was obedient, respectful and attentive and he was generally much attached to those whom he served, guarding their interest with the strictest fidelity. With new conditions of social life came great changes. Many remained faithful to the families with whom they had spent their lives. These were always cared for as long as the mistress persisted, but hundreds of devoted servants were turned out homeless when the change in fortune came, the master being utterly unable to provide for them. The new south knows nothing of the ideal servant save in a few isolated cases and by legend. The servant as he now appears is an impertinent, loud-mouthed and lazy. Few will work for a longer period than a week. With a few cents in the purse they slip out and away from the city home to the little hut near the cotton fields, there to live in idleness until the replenishing of the purse is absolutely necessary. They never sleep in the homes where they work preferring to return each night to the meager simulation of a home, no matter if it is several miles away.

IN HONOR OF MISS PATTISON.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Boltwood Entertain Eighty Guests.

Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Boltwood entertained eighty of their friends at a dancing party at the North park pavilion in honor of Miss Pattison of Hartford, Conn. The spacious ball room was decorated with autumn branches and hanging baskets. The music was furnished by the North park orchestra. Fees were secured in the card room during the intermissions. Mr. Geo. P. H. Fisher acted as master of ceremonies, assisted by Mr. Geo. S. Boltwood and Mr. Huntley Russell as floor managers. This was passed to the gentlemen while marching and each plucked a petal then danced with the lady whose name the petal bore. The figure was repeated with another daisy on which the gentlemen's names were written and the ladies plucked the petals. Refreshments were served at eleven o'clock in the dining room, each choosing partners and making down, Mr. Fisher and Miss Pattison leading. Mrs. Lowe's Reception.

Mrs. Edward Lowe's reception Wednesday was one of the most beautiful ever given in this city. The hours were from 4 to 6 o'clock. The decorations were very beautiful. The first glimpse of the hall seemed like a vision of fairyland. The far end was filled with stately palms from the foliage of which gleamed numberless fairy lamps. The heavy portieres had been removed from all the archways and in their places were portieres of smilax coupled, banded and bordered with La France roses. Roses in vases were all about the rooms. Gas and electricity were dispensed with and the illumination came from countless tall white tapers. The dining room was beautifully arranged. Upon the polished surface of the table repose a centerpiece of soft pink crepe de chene bordered with La France roses. At either end stood a tall silver candelabra. Colored waters served ices and cakes, and punch was served in a room upstairs. Mrs. Lowe who wore an exquisite gown of white brocade decollete and with a silver jeweled girdle was assisted in receiving by Mrs. John H. P. We have decided the question, and now have put the knife deep into the former prices on our elegant stock of rockers, chairs, tables, hall trees, sideboards and beautiful odd pieces of furniture. The cut takes off the profit and reaches clear down into the cost. We are going to move nothing to our factory, but are distributing our bargains around to the houses of the wise and fortunate. Call while the stock is fresh at the great Phoenix warehouses on Ottawa street.
